Sunday, October 28th Recap by Kayla Costenoble

While Still There is Light -- "Everyone wants to go to heaven, but nobody wants to die," Rev. Heather sang from the pulpit early in her reflection/sermon on October 25, 2015. This came after her opening words, "Let's get right to the heart of the matter."

And so we did, with helpful readings from Mitch Albom's "Tuesdays with Morrie;" Nancy Shaffer's "While Still There is Light: Writings from a Minister Facing Death;" and some honest and helpful words from Rev. Heather.

Rev. Heather insisted we must honor, explore, acknowledge and anticipate death. Our time here, between worlds, is so poignant and beautiful, but so is anticipating what's ahead. Fall would be her favorite season, she said, if it were not a reminder that winter lies ahead. Fall is a season of "shifting," a time to enjoy the sweet tone of lovely leaves but also to be aware of what the season portends.

Nancy Shaffer, a UU minister and poet, died on June 5, 2012, one year after brain surgery and her diagnosis of death from cancer. Her book of reflections and poems during that year was finished and put together by her close friend Rev. Mary McKinnon Ganz (I've ordered the book; it's on its way.). Rev. Ganz said Nancy "wrote with a terrible and beautiful honesty of her grief over the probable outcome of her cancer." Some words from her poem "After the Pathology Report:"

"When first I am realizing
 I may die from this and there may come a day when I can no longer rise from my bed
 I cannot tolerate seeing in my mind that not rising and how instead of rising, I fade into another realm in which I do not walk, think, breathe but am dead...
 and
 ...The only question large enough is how to give enough thanks for our lives.
 That's the beginning: large enough thanks.
 and
 That distillation of soul—which, of all possessions, is most precious—comes, if we are faithful, out of sorrow.
 This is the gift with which we escape, stumble out:
 we know the essence of this life and who we are.

Ever after, whatever we have, we have enough: begin complete, even with nothing, even though aching. In our lifetime, we learn this, while still we can cherish. Come complete to the end, and are full."

Writer Mitch Albom learned much during the Tuesdays he spent with his former teacher. These are some of the gems Morrie shared with him:

Everyone knows they are going to die, he said, but no one believes it. The question that should be asked is "Am I being the person I want to be?" Once you learn how to die, you learn how to live. Unable to go out and be in it, Morrie sees the world through his window; this causes him to see everything differently and realizes he might have to make room for more "spiritual things."

Rev. Heather suggested some things we might think about in this period from now through the mid-December solstice: What might you do differently if you knew you had one year to live? What to do with the time you have left? She urged us not to live in denial or defiance; we should let universal mortality be a cause for community. We should create something that gives us a purpose and refuse to blame ourselves or others. Although it is awkward to talk about how we will all die, it is good to think about the extraordinary mystery of our lives. We should be determined to savor and celebrate our lives, to share and move together on this journey.

Mike Winterfield, former chair of the USH Social Justice Committee, spoke about his work with the Tree of Life Foundation, an organization that focuses on education about the injustice in Israel and Palestine. "The land must be shared," Mike said. He has been on trips to both countries and finds working together with both sides "inspiring." Sunday's offering of $731 will go to benefit the Tree of Life Foundation.

Sunday's incredible anthem, Franz Biebl's "Ave Maria," was sung acapella and featured both solos and choir. It was chosen with Nancy Shaffer's journey through her experience of living with cancer in mind. Music kept her company all through that journey.

This weekend has been a journey for me. Saturday's celebration of Dorothy Fowler's life and Sunday's service have given me a lot to think about. Kayla Costenoble

GREAT DISCUSSIONS, Sunday, Nov 1. 9:00 AM EST in Servetus. DAYLIGHT SAVING TIME HAS ENDED: Next Sunday we’re going to branch off the discussion from last month regarding climate change, energy transition, local control etc. Paula Jones and Kevin Gough will lead the discussion. Here’s a teaser on the moral implications of this approach to climate change:

Rotering’s Economics of Needs and Limits (ENL) is an analytical framework that is intended to guide a contractionary, post-capitalist economy. It is based on the ethical principle that all human beings, present and future, are of high and equal worth. This implies that an economy must maximize well-being and equity while preserving the environment for future generations.

On Sunday Nov 15, we’ll probably be probing these issues further. Selected readings are available from Ed Savage ( edsavage \(at\)signsign)) ushartford.com )

"The Imitation Game"
USH Dinner & Movie
Friday, November 13, 2015

"Sometimes it is the people no one imagines anything of who do the things that no one can imagine." This oft repeated line splendidly sums up Alan Turing, the subject of the riveting and tension filled biopic 'The Imitation Game.' If you've never heard of Alan Turing, it's no surprise. He was kept secret by the British government for 50 years. This brilliant mathematician became the father of the computer while feverishly working to crack the Nazi's Enigma coding machine during World War II."

"The movie is undeniably strong in its sense of a bright light burned out too soon, and the often undignified fate of those who dare to chafe at society's established norms."*

Our Friday, November 13, Dinner & Movie Series will feature "The Imitation Game", a film earning great acclaim in this fall's voting by USH movie fans. This 2014 film stars Benedict Cumberbatch (star of the PBS "Sherlock" series) and Keira Knightley, runs almost 2 hours, and has English subtitles. It was nominated for 8 Academy Awards.

"In its review of the film, The New York Times has indicated a parental warning for 'advanced mathematics.' The complete notice reads, 'The Imitation Game' is rated PG-13 (parents strongly cautioned). Illicit sex, cataclysmic violence and advanced math, most of it mentioned rather than shown."*

You can watch a trailer at <https://m.youtube.com/watch?v=S5CjKEFb-sM>.

We will gather at 5:30 PM for socializing with popcorn and libations, have dinner of pizza and salad at 6, then watch the movie at 7, with optional discussion afterward. If you can arrive early to assist with set-up, your help will certainly be appreciated.

You can reserve ($10 each) with cash, check, or credit card at the Programs table during Sunday Fellowship Hours; otherwise, you may call Janice and leave a message at 860-677-1121, then pay with cash or check at the event. Please indicate your choice of meat or vegetable topping for pizza when reserving. Please reserve by noon on Wednesday, Nov. 11.

If you find that you cannot attend after reserving, please call and leave a message by noon Friday, Nov. 13, at 860-380-7062, so the pizza order can be adjusted.

- * Listening to the carolers as they stroll around the ambulatory...

Whatever it is, whether crafts or singing or the worship moment or telling Santa about your wish list, we'll have it all for you on Saturday, December 5th! The precise time is yet to be determined, but it looks like craft-making will begin around 3:30 and the dinner is likely to begin at 6:00. So what do we need?

We need volunteers! There is plenty of work and plenty of fun to be had at this congregation-wide, family-friendly celebration. Please contact the 2015 Festival of the Season Chair, via PatriceFitzgerald at gmail dot com, if you'd like to help. And thank you in advance!

Syrian Refugee Resettlement Help

A number of us at the Unitarian Society have been exploring what the congregation might do to help the large numbers of refugees from Syria, Iraq, Afghanistan and a number of African countries in resettling here.

We have contacted refugee resettlement agencies in New Haven and Hartford who have experience and support resources. We are identifying other congregations in the Hartford area with whom we might partner.

To resettle a family a number of support items are required (e.g.): rent for 4-6 months, furnishing the apartment with donated goods, help in obtaining employment, help to learn English, settling children in schools, getting health care, driving to appointments, acclimating to the area, government paperwork, etc.

How much of this we might undertake as a congregation alone or with others, or as individuals is to be determined.

We are now seeking to enlist other interested church members in this exploration. Please contact Mike Winterfield, Richard Groothuis, or Vanessa Gonzales Rivera, if you are interested in aiding in this effort. Photo: <http://security.blogs.cnn.com/>
